Building Service Contractors Association International BSCAI Revises and Upgrades its Certification Programs

CHICAGO – The Building Service Contractors Association International recently revised and updated its two certification programs to better meet the needs of its members and the BSC industry.

The Certified Building Service Executive (CBSE) program and exam has undergone a complete revision with new information, a completely restructured exam and updated materials to reflect the changing nature of the cleaning industry and the building service contractor professions.

The Registered Building Service Manager (RBSM) program has also been updated and reflects the newest in management and cleaning topics. This exam is now offered in both Spanish and English.

“This project was a major undertaking for our certification committee and professional staff,” stated Taylor Bruce of IH Services, Inc., the 2008 & 2009 BSCAI Certification Committee Chair. “We’re especially pleased with the new, easier format of the exams, which have undergone numerous reviews to ensure both the accuracy and completeness of the responsibilities desired in successful managers and executives. Subjects included in the course preparation materials cover the full gamut of responsibilities and skills needed by managers and executives.”

Certification can deliver a huge benefit to the individual member and their companies. It demonstrates to everyone in our industry the individual’s commitment to excel and dedication to continuing education.

“The CBSE and RBSM designations are a symbol of accomplishment and are recognized with great respect by other BSC’s and our customers. In this era of increased competition, clients and prospective customers alike seek credentials, substantive knowledge and experience,” said Bruce. “BSCAI’s certification programs fill that need.”
